

AERA AND THE WORKPLACE LEARNING SIG Newsletter Winter 2013

Editor: J. O. Brown

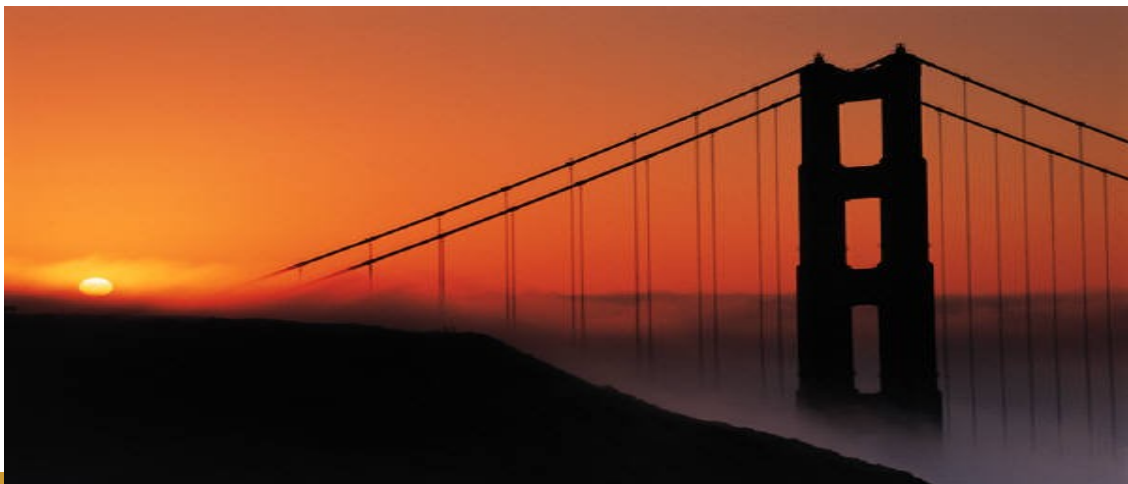

SEE YOU IN SAN FRANCISCO APRIL 27 TO MAY 1 2013

SIG NEWS FROM THE PROGRAM CHAIR

Marg Malloch

For the upcoming AERA Conference our SIG has three paper sessions with four papers each and 13 paper slots for roundtables. The SIG received 41 paper submissions. We had a good number of volunteers for reviewing - every paper was reviewed by three people. The AERA system is more sophisticated now and provides the review overall outcomes as raw scores and in a variety of mathematical compilations to assist in the decision making! The on line tutorials have been really helpful. AERA staff have been quick to reply to queries and to assist.

According to our membership officer the SIG has 186 members. However, I think we need to give a major effort to get the American members more active and submitting more paper proposals - we have successfully internationalized the SIG - now we need more local folks! Specifics on SIG Sessions will be forthcoming in the Spring 2013 Newsletter.

SIG DISSERTATION AWARD and DIVISION I BOOK NOMINATION

SIG Dissertation Award. Michelle Bartlett will chair the SIG's dissertation award committee and present the award for best dissertation at the SIG's Business Meeting in San Francisco. Division I. In early December Judith Brown responded to the Division I, Education in the Professions, invitation for the best research book in the field published in the last two years. She nominated The Sage Handbook of Workplace Learning (2010). Editors M. Malloch, L. Cairns, K. Evans, and B. O'Connor. London: Sage Publications written primarily by our SIG members. The Handbook is a seminal exploration of inquiry in the professions connecting research to both theory and practice. We will announce the outcome in our SIG Spring Newsletter.
